My tips for Newfoundland

This week is very special. We call it Newfoundland week!

As you surf on different websites about Newfoundland, you read this message:

Hi there,

My wife and I (and our two children, aged 8 and 10) will be travelling to Newfoundland from July 20 to 27, 2022. We have never been there before and we would appreciate some tips on what we can see and do as a family. We like camping, walking on nature trails, boating and cycling. My children love animals. My wife is an artist and would love to find a colourful spot for her next painting. Personally, I love history. Finally, we would all love to watch whales and icebergs.

Any ideas would be greatly appreciated. I look forward to reading all replies to my post.

Dan

Since you are already in Newfoundland to visit, you decide to help him. While reading his message, you realize his children are about the same age as you and share the same interests. You may be the best person to give him some tips.

How to do it?

a. Make a list of the family's interests.

b. Find activities based on their interests.

a. Find the information on different websites or pamphlets.

b. Copy and paste the website links you suggest he consults.

c. Tell him what you liked about your activities and your visits (descriptive paragraphs).

d. Give him some tips about what he should know before choosing a particular activity.

e. To make their stay more profitable, suggest that the family combine their activities. For example, while his wife paints a beautiful landscape at the campsite by the ocean, the children cycle on the trails.

Because of your excellent work, the family had a really good time in Newfoundland. They send you this picture! ☺
